

Innovative Clinical Doctoral Program Seeks Dynamic Leader

The California School of Professional Psychology (CSPP) at Alliant International University is home to a small, innovative, APA-accredited Clinical Psychology PsyD program, based in Fresno and Sacramento. We are seeking a dynamic and proven Program Director to begin Fall 2010. This full-time Program Director position requires both administrative and academic leadership, as one-half of the time is allotted to teaching and mentoring students. As Program Director you will work with faculty and program directors from the other CSPP clinical psychology and marital and family therapy programs at campuses throughout California, Asia and Mexico.

The faculty in Fresno and Sacramento is a diverse team of applied psychologists whose research and clinical interests encompass cognitive-behavioral, ecosystemic and psychodynamic interventions, program evaluation, phenomenological and action research, cross cultural and international studies, infant mental health, gerontology, sexual diversity, health psychology and alternative medicine. The program is committed to an integrative scholar practitioner model that trains students to consider the role of diverse systems in addressing individual and social problems. Leaders who embrace this model are strongly encouraged to apply.

The Fresno and Sacramento campuses are located in California's Central Valley, offering a very reasonable cost of living, as well as ready access to outdoor activities and landmarks such as Yosemite, Sequoia and Kings' Canyon National Parks.

Candidates should have a doctoral degree in psychology and be licensed or license-eligible in the State of California.
