

Widener University

Assistant Professor Clinical Psychology

The Institute for Graduate Clinical Psychology at Widener University is seeking applications for a tenure-track assistant professor position in Clinical Psychology, starting in the Fall of 2010. The desired area of experience is child psychology, including child and adolescent psychotherapy and assessment. Duties of this position include: graduate-level instruction and supervision of trainees in clinical settings, pursuit of a scholarly agenda, and service to the department and the profession. A Ph.D. in clinical psychology or a Psy.D. and relevant clinical experience are required. The individual should be licensed or license-eligible in Pennsylvania. Interested persons should send a letter of application, curriculum vitae and reprints to Frank Masterpasqua, Ph.D., Chair, Search Committee; Widener University, Institute for Graduate Clinical Psychology, One University Place, Chester, PA 19013 or fmasterpasqua@widener.edu. Widener University is located in Chester, PA, approximately 14 miles from Center City, Philadelphia. The Institute for Graduate Clinical Psychology is a unit of Widener University's School of Human Service Professions and is the oldest APA-accredited Doctor of Psychology (Psy.D.) program in the nation. The Institute and University have made a strong commitment to achieving diversity among faculty and staff, and members of minority groups and women are encouraged to apply. Widener University is an equal opportunity employer.